Taking A Look At

Loyola Student Life

RELAX . . .

Close the books for a while, get out of the library, dorm room, computer lab and study lounges . . . There's always something to do - parties, concerts, festivals, contests, special events . . . or make a party of your own at one of the frequent haunts of Loyola students. Come take a closer look at Loyola students at play.

SHANAHAN'S

THE PUB

"Be it ever so humble, there's no place like . . ." The Pub. The Pub sponsor's many concerts and special events throughout the year to entertain students and help them unwind from a hard day's work. Loyola's favorite watering hole, meeting place and most frequently used excuse for not studying provides the atmopshere of a home away from home without leaving campus.

Parent's Weekend

"Hello Muddah, Hello Fawtah this is life at Big Loyola . . ." Every year Loyola sponsors a "Parent's Weekend" and invites the student's parents to visit the campus and meet the faculty and staff. This affords parents the opportunity to view life at Loyola and helps to bridge the distance between home and school.

Pumpkin Carving

Will the real Great Pumpkin please stand up! The Pumpkin carving contest brought new life to the old concept of Jack-O-Lanterns. Students worked diligently to make the event a messy and memorable one.

HOMECOMING DANCE

The Homecoming Dance is an annual Loyola tradition. Students, faculty and alumni gather to enjoy an evening of fun and dance.

TRIVIA BOWL

Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Trivia . . . not since Monopoly hit the market has a board game demanded such attention. Loyola students are no different from the rest of the people in the U.S.A. in their devotion to the game. A Trivia-Bowl brought the greatest trivial minds together for an evening of fierce competition on November 29.

Top: The winners, the champions, the ones whose claim to fame is that they know most about insignificant data are The Beggers represented by Jude Trahant, Doug Curault, Scott Shea and Scott Montz. Middle Left: Others sit and stare in awe as Scott answers correctly to the question "Who's Fred Flinstone's best friend?" Middle Right: Scott Shea raises a beer in triumph. Bottom: Emily Cox keeps score.

KISSING CONTEST

"Never kiss and tell" is usually good advice. But on November 30, Loyola students were kissing and telling everyone, hoping to break the Guiness Book World Record for simultaneous kissing in one place. Unfortunately the goal was not met. Nonetheless, students puckered up for posterity sake and enjoyed every minute of it.

KISSING CONTEST

"Give me a little kiss, will ya hon?"

CASINO NIGHT

Delta Sigma Pi was a big hit and brought home big bucks with their casino night. Black jack, craps, roulette were the games of the evening. But what, no Bingo? Maybe next time . . .

THE COLD

New Orleans' own favorite group - The Cold. With their upbeat lyrics and cosmic antics they are always a hit at T.G.I.F. or the Pub or around town in a favorite club. No matter where they play, a crowd heats up and the fun begins.

Top: The Pub welcomes The Cold. Middle Left: Barbara Menendez warms up the keyboards. Middle Right: "2 girls and me and The Cold . . . unbelievable!" Bottom: The band in full swing.

Awakening Retreat

Everyone needs a little time away, to reflect, to meditate, to pray. The Awakening retreat, sponsored by Campus Ministry provided this for Loyola students, and also offered an opportunity for students to share with one another and to get to know each other better.

International Week

International Culture and Civilization Week brought a variety of cultural flavors to the Union and to Loyola, including the Kambuka African Dance and Drum Collective.

Mark Weiner

The Pub was the place to be when up and coming comedian Mark Weiner and his infamous Weinerettes took the stage for a zany evening of off-the-wall antics.

The Dating Game

Having trouble making the dating scene at Loyola? This happy coed knew what to do to beat the blahs - The Dating Game, sponsored by the Loyola Union, provided fun, laughs and a dream date for the lucky couples.

"Bachelor number two, what's the air speed velocity of an unladen swallow?"
"Well, uh, is that an African or a European Swallow?"

Beta Picnic

Loyola's location provides relaxation at the doorstep in beautiful Audubon Park. Beta Beta Beta took advantage of the situation for their annual picnic.

Top: Suck the heads, pinch the tails and guzzle all the beer you can. Middle: What's all the smiling about? Is this a party or what? Bottom: "What do you with these things after you peel them?"

ISA Picnic

"Saturday, in the park, you'd think it was the fourth of July . . ." or so it seemed when ISA got together for their picnic at Audubon park. The weather was beautiful, the food was good and the company made the day a special one.

"I'm glad you wore white pants, too. Now I have someone to stand up with for the rest of the day!"

Around Town

Although Loyola offers many extracurricular activities, students feel the need to get away from campus to relax from time to time. On almost any night of the week Loyola students can be found at nearby watering holes like Shanahan's, Daiquiris, Audubon Tavern II, T.J. Quills or Cooter Brown's.

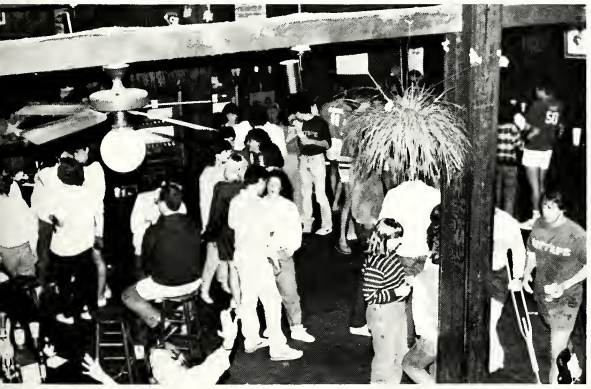
Around Town

Whether dancing, playing pool, video games, darts or quarter bounce, Loyola students rarely miss a party. Sometimes present in numbers, sometime in spirit only, uptown New Orleans Rocks and Rolls on with the help of Loyola students.



Top: "For this I went to college?" Bottom: Audubon Tavern II rocks on a typical Thursday night.

Hanging Around

A large part of student life at Loyola is the Loyola community, itself - hanging around the union, making friends, enjoying the company of others like yourself, and the company of those a bit different. Sharing everything from class notes to blow dryers to meal tickets brings a closeness and sense of togetherness

Hanging Out

TGIF, the Pub, the dormitories, the student union, the quad are only a few of the places Loyola students choose to call comfortable and home.

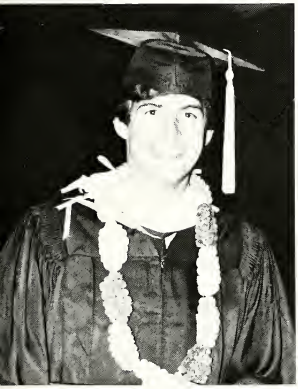
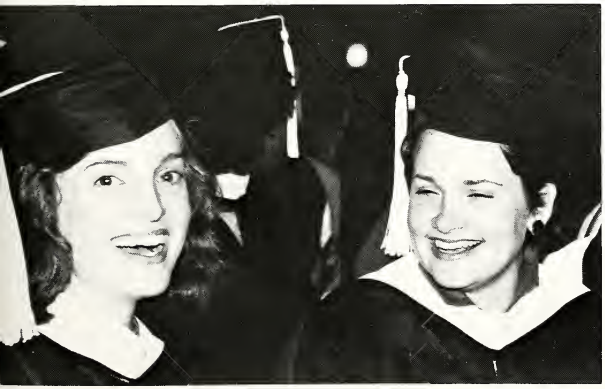
Graduation Day

Graduation Day is the day anticipated during every difficult exam, every tedious term paper and every long registration line. As one student put it, "It's the day you can breathe again"

Top: The graduation procession finds Mark Tiner, Father Mailou and Sabrina Cazaban marching up the aisle at Holy Name Church. Middle: Katie Meskell smiles at the thought of graduating. Bottom: Lea, Joy and Carla wait for diplomas.





Graduation Day

What will happen now? What will the future hold? The graduate must leave the shelter of university life and move forward, with memories of the good life at Loyola embedded in their hearts.

Top: Father Carter and Arch bishop Hannan lead the graduation procession. Middle: The overwhelming happiness prevails. Bottom: Karen and Jan share a good time.

Going Home

Another Semester gone . . . pages of memorabilia fill the scrapbooks, photos fill the albums, parents await the arrival of the student's return home. But goodbyes are not always easy . . .

Top: Helen Haley promises to write. Middle left: Debbie Smith exits Buddig Hall for the Summer. Middle Right: "It will never fit." Bottom: Heading for home.

Going Home

Funky Freshmen turn into Sophisticated Sophomores by autumn. A new senior looks forward to the end of common curriculum. The end of one year brings the dreams of what the next year will hold. But summer lies ahead . . . a long, hot summer that can make Loyola seem a million miles away. See you in September!

Top: "I'm glad I don't have to carry this stuff all the way home." Bottom: "Students say goodbye for the summer.

Taking A Look At

Administration, Faculty, And Staff

James C. Carter, S.J.
President, Loyola University

"Loyola is a special place because it knows where it is going. Loyola has made a deliberate choice to be an undergraduate teaching institution. Our energies will not be diluted by an attempt to do other good things — such as health care or research which weakens the commitment to teaching.

The result is that, at Loyola, every student has the opportunity to know faculty members, including Jesuits, well and to learn and grow in an atmosphere in which the student feels wanted and respected."
... James C. Carter, S.J., President.

Office Of The President

Academic Affairs

Dr. Robert A. Preston, Vice President of Academic Affairs.

"Loyola University, unlike many educational institutions, has clearly defined its goals and objectives. On the basis of these stated goals it has gone about the difficult job of planning for the future. This planning is evident to the student in two main areas: physical planning, which has resulted in the construction of the two new buildings on St. Charles Avenue and the purchase of the Dominican campus, and academic planning, which has resulted in more rigorous degree requirements.

In the years ahead Loyola will continue to move towards the fulfillment of its goals and objectives as it strives to become the outstanding Jesuit and Catholic University in the South.

Loyola's unique character is found in its commitment to high standards and its dedication to giving assistance to each individual student to meet those standards. In this way Loyola remains true to its own educational mission and it challenges the student to fulfill his or her potential with the help of the Loyola community." — Dr. Robert A. Preston, Vice President for Academic Affairs.

"What makes Loyola special at this time and place?

The answer I am certain is that our problems have not disappeared. There is still the need to resolve the parking issue on and around campus, the Student Government Association must fulfill its potential, the lecture series sponsored by the Ideas and Issues Committee of Loyola Union will stretch our skills, increasing concern for Alcohol Awareness and the need to be sensitive to the needs for multi-culturalism, will still be with us as we return to Loyola in the Fall. Why is Loyola University special?

I believe it is special because of the manner with which it addresses these problems. The vigor with which Loyola announces in its Goals, Character and Commitment Statements, the purpose and intentions that it has, the fact that problems are addressed in a forthright manner, the awareness for the need to involve all aspects of the community in the solution process, and the attitude of "why not" instead of "it can not be done" makes Loyola special.

This willingness to articulate a philosophy, the wisdom of including each of us in the process, the nuturing that allows us to risk, the challenge of human development for all society creates an exciting hope-filled future. Loyola University is here to help each of us grow and develop all of our faculties. The spirit of Loyola involves each of us and it is that spirit that makes our future so very bright." ... "Special. No other word captures what Loyola is and represents. From the sense of community and the at-home friendly atmosphere to the loving care which permeates the campus, Loyola stands out. And Loyola is set apart for one other reason, its students.

As a staff member in Admissions, advisor to "Encore" and to Alpha Chi Omega, I've had the opportunity and pleasure of keeping in touch with the students. What the students bring with them as freshmen and what they take with them upon graduation is the essence of Loyola. Everyone contributes of themselves and everyone takes Loyola. Everyone gives of one's self and everyone takes a piece of the whole.

It is this sharing which makes recruiting students a loving task. It becomes even easier when touring prospective students are met with open arms by students who are already a part of the Loyola family. I thank you, the students of Loyola." . . Debbie Duffy, Admissions.

Intrafraternity Council

What is a social fraternity? A brotherhood of men which provides a positive environment for individual social development. At Loyola, however, even more is expected from a social fraternity. A fraternity brother at Loyola is first and formost a student who must be dedicated to his work in order to be able to participate fully. He is also a man for others, since brotherhood at Loyola encompasses service to everyone within and beyond the university community. A fraternity brother also knows that without a strong sense of values, no brotherhood can remain united. Thus, a brother at Loyola is a man with values. Together, these characteristics point to the ultimate goal of the greek identity at Loyola: student leadership.

In many ways, greeks set the pace of student life at Loyola simply because of involvement. This, then, is the responsibility of Loyola's social fraternities: to be examples of the commitment to unity which makes Loyola a community in the true Jesuit tradition.

And Now, As The PKT World Turns . . .

"It's the nature of the organization, the people they attract." Vincent P. Knipfing, Vice President for Student Affairs December, 1984

By Rene Sanchez and Keith Magill

The story of Pi Kappa Theta 1984-85 reads like a Hemmingway novel about the Spanish Civil War. Or World War I. Or an old man battling a big fish. There weren't necessarily any good guys and bad guys in the traditional sense. Only confused guys who battled from the beginning to the bitter end . . .

— In April 1974, PKT was sued for $460,000 after allegedly causing a spinal injury to a Loyola student during pledge initiation. Fraternity members were accused of pushing a blindfolded pledge into a three-feet deep, six-feet wide hole filled with water. The pledge suffered paralyzing injuries. Knipfing said, at the time, that PKT's charter should be removed.

— In December 1974, PKT was suspended from campus for violating its probationary status. Violations included "kidnapping" of fraternity members by other PKTs, as well as other pledge offenses.

— During 1982, PKT'S charter was revoked weeks after state park officials filed a complaint against the fraternity for damaging facilities at Fountainebleau State Park in Slidell.

— In October 1984, police on the Lake Pontchartrain Causeway found two PKT pledges who had been left by other fraternity members, stranded on the bridge.

They were supposed to fade away quickly.

At the end of November, Pi Kappa Theta was permanently banned from Loyola. Knipfing made that decision.

"I believe the membership of PKT is unable to assume the responsibilities associated with citizenship in this community," Knipfing said when the decision was made. "Effective this date, their charter and recognition within the Loyola greek community is permanently revoked. No future consideration will be given to reinstatement."

Knipfing's decision came after PKT had been on university probation for two and a half years for "numerous acts and violations of university policy and the embarrassment of the university."

As the fall semester ended, PKT's position was considered moot after years of being labled the black sheep of Loyola's greek community.

But it was only the beginning. Throughout the spring semester, the banned fraternity grabbed front-page headlines in The Maroon. PKT was still alive, and administrators were not happy about it, specifically the university president.

The Reverend James C. Carter, S.J., in a memo to the Office of Scholarships and Financial Aid said, "I have decided that no member who identifies himself, or is in any other way identified, as a member of PKT is to receive Loyola-funded student financial aid."

"We looked into every option for dealing with these young males who call themselves members of PKT and this was the best plan we could come up with," Carter said.

Members of PKT were surprised by Carter's memo.

Matt Straley, PKT president at the time of the memo said, "I thought that was the end of it in December. But we come back. Bang. First week of school. Here we go again."

PKT hired an attorney to research the legality of Loyola's new policy. The attorney said the university was "treading on dangerous ground," emphasizing that the new policy violated a person's constitutional rights because it restricted freedom of association.

Nothing was settled. As the semester ended, no PKT member had been stripped of his financial aid because of his affiliation with the group. The PKT controversy, however, persisted.

In March, the SGA approved a resolution which condemned Loyola's actions against fraternity members. The resulution pointed specifically to two university sanctions: Carter's memo, and alleged discrimination against members involved in an incident during an intramural basketball game in the Recreation Center.

The PKT students involved were ejected from the game and disciplined after commiting flagrant personal fouls, receiving an excessive number of technical fouls and allegedly harassing officials after the game.

The students admitted they committed the fouls, but denied the harassment allegation. They also claimed that regular disciplinary procedure was sidestepped, and that Knipfing denied them their right of appeal. Knipfing said the message behind his disciplinary decision was that "association [with PKT] is going to cost a higher price."

Knipfing was not pleased with the SGA's resulution. "I find it interesting that they don't condemn the behavior of the individuals involved . . .," he said.

Carter's only response to the SGA's resolution was that the university had been "far too patient" in dealing with PKT.

But the SGA was not finished. Part two of their resolution, that an SGA committee investigate the allegations of discrimination, caused more trouble.

After conducting the investigation, the SGA issued a letter addressed to Knipfing. The letter requested the Office of Student Affairs, specifically Knipfing, respond to the alleged violations of student rights at one of the remaining SGA meetings.

Knipfing got angry. The same day he received the SGA letter, he responded. He said the SGA was directly challenging the university's authority to revoke PKT's charter and permanently ban them from the campus.

"Pi Kappa Theta has no rights on this campus and I will not tolerate organizations that continue to recognize their [PKT's] existence by dealing directly with them," Knipfing said.

The SGA's letter, according to Knipfing, was filled with half-truths, and conveniently left out some of the facts. He said the SGA had stepped out of bounds and had given a false legitimacy to PKT.

Outgoing SGA President Clark Kelly, who helped write the letter, disagreed. "We looked into what we saw as the facts," Kelly said. "It is the SGA's perogative, the SGA's duty to protect student rights."

PKT has dug its own grave. "The organization is not welcome on campus. The decision is final, irrevocable," Knipfing said.

But Matt Niemann, PKT president does not buy that statement. He said that PKT still hopes to prove itself to the Loyola community.

Knipfing insists Loyola has no interest in working with PKT. "It's over," he said.

PKT at least hopes to eliminate the stigma attached to its members, Niemann said. "It's like Big Brother is always watching," he said. "We'd like to get some type of happy medium. Right now, we're kinda in limbo."

Still, the group's solidarity sticks. Niemann said that every time PKT is "stepped on," the group grows stronger. During the fall semester, the fraternity recruited 23 new members as a banned organization.

"In PKT, the brotherhood is much deeper than in other fraternities," Niemann said. He said PKT's partying, irresponsible reputation has been sensationalized.

"Knipfing thinks we're a bunch of criminals," Niemann said.

But PKT was only trying to achieve "social enhancement," according to Niemann. "That's what college is all about: you bust ass for school and have a good time in the process," Niemann said.

So the clash continues. Knipfing won't budge. and PKT won't die.

In the past, our organization has been primarily composed of Hispanic students. Our goal this year was to integrate Hispanics, Melaysians, Americans and others into one united group.

I.S.A.'s purpose was not only to meet the needs of international students, but to promote multicultural understanding. We believe that this year's I.S.A. parties, picnics, sports events and, most notably, International Week helped to foster a positive relationship among all Loyola students.

Our executive council consisted of five members from five different backgrounds. Through cooperation, effort and especially with the assistance of our advisor, Debbie Danna, we achieved our set goals. We hope to be as successful in the future.

Black Student Union

Throughout this year our motto has been "Educating as we achieve." We sought to determine the concerns of a group of students whose interests were different from that of the masses — not in the educational sense but in the social and communal. What happened was that Black Student Union served an integral part in sensitizing the entire community.

By November, BSU membership had increased to 150 members and the committees were well established and functioning. This was the biggest month of the year for us. On November 15, BSU brought Alex Haley, internationally renowned author of the bestseller Roots. The event was publicized throughout the city and was, as Father James C. Carter put it, "A proud moment for all of us at Loyola."

In February, a series of programs depicting Afro-American accomplishments was held as part of Black History Month. Students read poetry, sang, danced and displayed their talents to the student body.

March brought out the fascinating talents of students interested in theatre as the BSU stressed the importance of black theatre productions on campus. The play For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide When the Rainbow is Not Enuf was performed. Nunemaker Hall was the setting and March 28 and 29 saw it filled to capacity. Again, this event was publicized throughout New Orleans and both performances were rousing successes.

Finally, this year the Black Student Union, with the help of Dr. Norman Roussell, Dr. Bobby Cummings, and all the members and supporters has become the best the organization has ever been. My thanks to all. It was a move.

Residential Life

Being a Resident Assistant was at times frustrating, hectic and chaotic. But, these periods were rare compared to the rewarding times: when a resident passed a difficult test and shared it; when someone asked for help with a problem and you helped them solve it; when a fellow R.A. offered to take hall duty for you to give you a break; when the boss said "good job."

However, the biggest rewards were the friendships developed along the way. Graduation is a happy time, but it is with sadness that many friends are left behind.

Life & Times

OON

Editorial

Although it is a year we will all remember, for some, the memories aren't all sugar sweet . . .

It has often been stated that college students' orientation toward success has made them more conservative and less likely to protest than their counterparts from the '60s. 1984-85 serves as proof of this thesis.

Students failed to stand up for their rights in every instance. They quietly accepted the breath test. They quietly accepted a 100 percent increase in the fees they must pay to the Student Government Association although no poll had been taken to assess the students' wishes. They quietly accepted the elimination of their right to decide for themselves whether they could withdraw from a course.

Even more perplexing, they quietly and submissively accepted the decision of the New Orleans City Council to deny them the right to park their cars near campus. Yes, they half-heartedly complained, but when the City Council refused to allow representatives from Loyola to speak at a public hearing on the issue, they submitted to the council's will.

All in all, 1984-85 was the year of yuppie stupor.

Al Hanson, business major, on being a junior...

Junior year for me has been a time when I've found myself remembering the past, while looking forward to the future.

It seems just yesterday I was a freshman, and it is devastating to realize that come Fall 1985, only one-fourth of the people I started with will be returning while so many are no longer a part of my life.

This is also a time that has enabled me to reflect on what Loyola has afforded me in the last three years: the good times, the challenges, the accomplishments, the friends. Sometimes I look back and it's hard for me to remember the day-to-day things, but I thank God for the growth that has come because of them.

But it is scary and kind of sad not being able to remember everything, and I worry about what my memories will be like a few years down the road. Thinking that, I suddenly find myself redirecting my goals and rededicating my actions to making this college experience a special one, one I will be able to draw from in the future, and one which I will forever be able to recall as productive, meaningful and joyous.

Terri Roraff, communications major, on being a sophomore

The "post-freshman, pre-upperclassman syndrome" falls at a most appropriate time . . . sophomore year.

With two years left to go, seeming unending, credit hours of "uncommon" curriculum stand between student and graduation. In the interim, liberal arts courses slowly transform students into open-minded individuals, although many could use a few more answers about balancing checking accounts and learning about proper nutrition.

And who could ever forget the late-night orders of pizza to satisfy the all-nighter cravings, or the impulsive road trips to the beach for few hours of glorious tanning? The freedom seems limitless, yet the long-distance phone bills to home are proof of periods of insecurity.

Then, as quickly as the second year began, it ends. The dorm room goes into storage and roommates part for the summer. The Loyola spirit freezes . . . all to be rekindled once again in the fall . . . as a junior.

Theresa Crushshon, business major, on being a freshman . . .

Freshman year means a lot of different things, but to me it will always be weight loss from improper food in the Orleans Room, weight gain from Dominoes pizza, exam stress, massive cramming, hang-overs the morning after, fire alarms, gorgeous men, spring break in Florida, pub parties and T.G.I.F.s.

It was also a unique experience. I learned to live and function in an academically, socially and culturally diverse environment. The Loyola community has forced me to look inward, to question, to challenge my presupposed beliefs and attitudes towards college life and through it all I perservered and matured.

"MOST STUDENTS DON'T KNOW THAT ARMY ROTC LEADS TO AN ARMY OFFICER'S COMMISSION AT GRADUATION."

Besides studying for his degree in management, senior Scott Bacon is also learning what it takes to become an officer through Army ROTC.

"I attended an Army ROTC Day during my freshman summer orientation. When I found out you weren't obligated to anything your freshman and sophomore years, I decided to try it. I enjoy ROTC. I'm learning things I normally wouldn't learn in college. Like leadership theories. And tactics. The management training you receive is really good, too. It helped me a lot with my other management courses.

"I'm pretty involved with the University, so I'm glad ROTC doesn't take up a lot of time. It's just a couple of hours a week. At the end of your junior year, you have to go to Advanced Camp. It's a lot of fun. You get introduced to everything the Army has to offer. Tanks, helicopters, you name it.

"In your last two years of ROTC, you receive $100 a month. The way I see it, ROTC is paying you money and you just give the Army back a little of your time. When I get out of the Army, my experience should make it easier to get a job. Corporations look for officers, because they have experience managing people and equipment. And I think starting salaries might be higher because of that experience."

For Scott Bacon, adding Army ROTC to his college schedule has really paid off. Because it actually added another dimension to his college education.

And Army ROTC can do the same for you.

For more information, stop by the Army ROTC office on your campus today.

Full Tuition Scholarships are available on campus. Loyola University will also contribute $400 a semester to scholarship winners who attend Loyola University. Programs are also available at the following universities in the New Orleans area: Dillard, SUNO, Tulane, UNO, and Xavier. Call 865-3425 for more information.

Scott Bacon, management major and member of Army ROTC.

ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

The Loyola Military Science Department offers four-year and two-year ROTC programs to undergraduate and graduate full-time students of Loyola University.

Students in the four-year program participate in military science classes 2 or 3 times a week during their Freshman through Senior year. A Leadership Laboratory (outdoor training) is conducted once each month and is designed to complement classroom instruction and is available to all ROTC students.

Between the Junior and Senior academic years cadets attend a six-week summer camp for field training. For this training, cadets are paid a daily salary plus transportation cost (approximately $600 plus room and board). During the advanced course, Junior and Senior cadets are paid a subsistence allowance of $100 per month.

For more information call our office about 4, 3 or 2-YEAR SCHOLARSHIPS AT 865-3425.
